

A Note About the Proceeds from Sales

The more I travel, the more I realize that my life and where it has taken me is a tremendous gift.

This gift isn't given to everyone, and it strikes me as sheer blind luck the circumstances we are born into.

I feel like having these images and being allowed into these places was reward enough, and its just good ju-ju to give back anything monetary that comes out of them... If not to the people that allowed me into these special spaces then at least to a group of people who's work has really touched me and who's survival I feel connected to.

My partner did some volunteer work with CCAC in Mozambique last year, and since then we have been trying to help the founders raise capital for income generating projects such as bread production.

I have so much respect for this center because it is two people taking responsibility for the most easily ignored and rejected members of their community. After some very disappointing experience with a big foreign NGO, it has become clear to us how effective and important it is to have people caring for each other in their own community.

You can learn about the men, women and children that make up CCAC at:
<http://centrocomunitariocarinhosaaissa.blogspot.com/>

We hope to continue to find ways to help this center fund its self, and return there in the next 18 months with something that will aid their goals of being self sustaining, such as solar panels.

A big thank you for your support and interest.

- Michelle Wilson